Mayor Pipe joins pupils from Holy Trinity Primary School, E8 who showed off their gold I Love Hackney goodies at the Paralympic Handover event in Town Hall Square

PARTY LIKE IT'S 2012

By
Emma Britton

BIG crowds gathered to welcome the Paralympic Games to Hackney with a party in the Town Hall Square.

The event marked the moment the Paralympic flag was passed to London and it became the official host city for 2012.

The handover was shown live from Beijing on a big screen, accompanied by a colourful display from Hackney-based Chinese parade band Jun Mo and a confetti cannon blast.

The celebrations on 17 September were opened by Mayor of Hackney, Jules Pipe, and Paralympic gold medal swimmer Giles Long.

The square was transformed into an action packed zone with disability sports displays including wheelchair badminton, wheelchair basketball from the Hackney Sparrows, positive mental attitude football, and Boccia, a Paralympic sport similar to Boules. Acts included wheelchair line dance from

Rhinestone Rollers, the Light Sleepers band featuring adults with mental health needs, Core Arts drumming and Britain's Got Talent favourites, Hoop La La, who train in Hackney. There were also 14 stalls providing information on services offered by disability groups, charities and the Council, plus opportunities such as volunteering. The event was hosted by deaf comedian Steve Day and volunteers from local organisations, including Age Concern Hackney, helped out as stewards.

“I'm delighted so many people joined in welcoming the Paralympic Games”

Mayor Pipe said: “I am delighted so many people joined in welcoming the Paralympic Games to Hackney.

With almost one third of the Olympic Park site in our borough, we'll be at the heart of the 2012 Games.

“We're now looking forward to celebrating the launch of the Cultural Olympiad at the end of the month, promoting culture and the arts as part of the Games like never before.”

Earlier in the day, Mayor Pipe and the chief executive of the London 2012 Organising Committee (LOCOG), Paul Deighton visited young people taking part in a third and final day of sports championships at Clissold Leisure Centre.

Host borough for 2012 Olympic and Paralympic Games

Message from the Mayor

Going beyond sport to make most of Games

What part will 2012 play in your future?

HACKNEY celebrated Paralympic handover this month, and the whole country celebrated the amazing achievements of our Paralympic team who came home from Beijing with more than 100 medals. (See report on pg 1 & 3) The athletes who competed are a true inspiration, and it has been good to see the Paralympics get some of the recognition it deserves as a sporting event. No one could fail to be impressed by the world-class athletes taking part in the Olympics and Paralympics, but as I have said many times before, being a host borough for 2012 is not just about sport. The Games will bring a whole range of opportunities for Hackney people, including thousands of new jobs, before, during and after the competition. It is vital to make sure that local people, and young people in particular, have the skills they need to make the most of these opportunities. The Council, as Hackney's largest employer, has a big part to play in providing training opportunities. So I was very pleased to welcome Skills Minister, David Lammy, to the borough to meet the 17 school leavers working as apprentices for the Council, learning a range of professional skills from finance and business administration to youth work and horticulture. (See pg2) These are paid apprenticeships which will give them the skills they need to forge successful careers and we hope to see 100 local young people through the scheme by 2011. As we enter challenging economic times, it is more important than ever to ensure that Hackney's workforce is highly skilled and able to compete in what may become a tighter employment market. I would encourage all Hackney employers to take a look and consider what opportunities they can offer to our young talent. For more info, visit: www.apprenticeships.org.uk

TWO high profile Government ministers came to Hackney this month to meet the borough's young people.

Skills Minister, David Lammy, came to Hackney Town Hall to talk with young people working as apprentices for the Council. A total of 17 apprentices have so far been employed, with a further eight lined up with Hackney Homes. They are paid to learn a range of professional skills ranging from finance and business administration to youth work and horticulture. Mayor of Hackney, Jules Pipe, welcomed the minister, adding: "Congratulations to our apprentices who are a proud testament to the value and success of the scheme. We hope to see 100 local young people through the programme by 2011."

The ministerial visit on 17 September coincided with the Learning and Skills Council's (LSC) London Apprenticeship Taskforce meeting, hosted in the Council Chamber. The apprentices, together with guests from LSC and Hackney Community College, answered questions from the minister about the apprenticeship programme. The event also saw the Council sign up to the Skills Pledge, a commitment to increase the number of young people achieving Level 2 NVQ in the borough. In a separate visit on 10 September, Secretary of State for Children, Schools and Families, Ed Balls, attended the official opening of the Bridge Academy in Haggerston. The ceremony took place in the school's performing arts studio and visitors, including Mayor Pipe, looked in on a music class, where the minister tried his hand at drumming. The academy accepted its first intake of pupils last September, but they were housed in temporary accommodation until this year.

A TEAM of fundraisers have set off on a gruelling 1,200km, non-stop relay from Hackney to the French Mediterranean coast.

The 20 strong group, made up of staff from Hackney police, the Crown Prosecution Service and Hackney Council, aim to raise £30,000 for charity.

The 72-hour challenge will see the team running in relay to Folkestone and through northern France to the Arc de Triomphe in Paris. Cyclists will then take up the baton for the long haul to Montpellier on the south coast of France.

Assistant Metropolitan Police Commissioner, Tim Godwin, and Mayor of Hackney, Jules Pipe, were there to wish them luck when they set out on 18 September.

Hackney's Borough Commander, Chief Superintendent Steve Dann, is driving one of the team's support vehicles down to Paris. He said: "It's going to be a gruelling challenge for all involved but I've no doubt they will be successful and raise valuable funds to benefit our local community."

The three charities to benefit are Hackney based youth group SkyWay; Chance UK, which provides mentoring to primary school children in the borough; and Macmillan Cancer Support.

The team is sponsored by London Fields Cycles; Xcel Energy Drinks and Buy-To-Let Montpellier; with support from Hackney police's social fund and the Council. But they still need

"I've no doubt they will be successful and raise valuable funds" local businesses and residents to support them.

Countdown to the 2012 Games

From 15 to 17 September, over 750 schoolchildren took part in a Paralympics championship, featuring wheelchair basketball, goalball and judo.

The three day event, organised by the Learning Trust, promoted a message of inclusion for both disabled and non-disabled young people in UK sport. Paralympic gold medal swimmers Giles Long and Elaine Barrett were on hand to inspire young people with motivational speeches.

The final day featured an All-Star wheelchair basketball match with Sam Bond, Nick Aldis, Jenny Pacey and Caroline Pearce also known as Atlas, Oblivion, Enigma and Ice from TV's Gladiators.

The young people also had the chance to meet 2012 Paralympic horse riding hopeful Natasha Baker.

Why did the chicken box cross the road?

By
Lara Edgar

IT'S not uncommon to come across strange sights on Hackney's streets. But don't worry if you see a giant burger, fag packet, ciggie and chicken box crossing the road, you're not hallucinating.

The eye-catching characters are part of a borough wide campaign to urge residents to do their bit to help Keep Hackney Tidy.

The month long drive will also see the Council's environmental enforcement teams out and about, talking to residents and businesses about taking responsibility for keeping our streets clean, reducing excessive noise and air pollution.

The teams work round the clock to tackle people who drop litter, graffiti property, allow their dogs to foul our parks and streets, upset neighbours with noisy parties, fly post, dump waste and much more.

We all want to live or work in a borough which is clean and safe

In the last year, the team has carried out 10,000 inspections on commercial premises, resulting in 3,000 enforcement actions against businesses not disposing of their waste properly.

Fly-tipping carries a maximum fine of £50,000 and dropping litter on the street, including cigarette butts and chewing gum, can result in an on the spot fine of £80. Dog owners who don't clean up after their pets also face a Fixed Penalty Notice of £80.

Cllr Alan Laing, Member for Neighbourhoods, said: "We all want to live or work in a borough which is clean and safe. Our waste, street cleaning and environmental enforcement teams work hard to deliver this. But it can only be achieved with co-operation from business owners and residents."

KEY FACTS

- There are 1,050 bins in Hackney

Walking for peace

Crowds look on in Town Hall Square as Ian Levy makes his speech (above)

By Ruth Garland

IN glorious afternoon sunshine, hundreds of people gave up an hour of their time to celebrate peace and reconciliation.

Mayor Jules Pipe; the Speaker for Hackney, Cllr Ian Rathbone; Ian Levy, from the Robert Levy Foundation; and representatives from many of Hackney's diverse faith, youth and community groups, were among the 350-strong crowd that joined the Hackney Peace Walk. It was one of many events around the capital to mark the London Week of Peace.

Passers-by waved and drivers hooted their horns in support as the walk progressed down Kingsland Road from Stoke Newington Common, and along Dalston Lane and Graham Road to the Town Hall Square.

Jewish, Muslim, Buddhist, Turkish, Kurdish, Vietnamese and Afro-Caribbean people of all ages were represented.

Hackney's two MPs, Diane Abbott and Meg Hillier; the Bishop of Stepney; and Superintendent Alun Goode, from Hackney police, also took part.

He said: "Hackney police have had an active involvement in London Week of Peace since it started. This year saw an excellent turn out for the Hackney Peace Walk, which was an opportunity to celebrate the rich diversity of the borough, strengthen community links and reduce the fear of crime."

Walkers were welcomed with refreshments; and rhythm and dance by Kurdish performers from the Alevi Cultural Centre. There was a parade of musical talent from Hackney's schools, organised by the Learning Trust and young musicians from youth music project, Rising Tide. The world-

Kyle and Caleb (right) getting their message across renowned London Community Gospel Choir also made a surprise visit.

Welcoming the crowd, Mayor Pipe thanked everyone for giving up their Sunday afternoon to take part. He said: "We've certainly got a lot to feel proud of and to celebrate here in Hackney, but we can't ignore the fact that two young men, Shaquille Smith and Ahmed

Benyermak, lost their lives this summer.

"We can only beat this problem if we work together. That's why this Peace Walk is important. It shows that people from all walks of life are prepared to stand up for peace."

Ian Levy, father of Robert Levy, 16, who was murdered four years ago, made a moving speech about his faith in the young people of Hackney and his commitment to helping them to reach their potential.

He said: "Hackney is a great place to live. I wouldn't live anywhere else."

“ This shows that people from all walks of life are prepared to stand up for peace ”

Where Choo found his feet

By
Sylvia Arthur

HACKNEY can claim many famous fashion alumni but none are as synonymous with style as shoemaker to the stars – Jimmy Choo.

A-listers from the worlds of film, music and the arts all flock to Jimmy's swanky central London boutique to get their mitts on his unique, handmade shoes for everything from glitzy parties to glittering premieres.

But when Jimmy arrived in London in the 1980s he couldn't have known how important a role the vibrant, creative atmosphere of Hackney would play in his life. The borough gave Jimmy his start in the fashion industry, as he went from struggling student to multimillionaire.

As an apprentice at the prestigious Hackney based Cordwainers' college, the Malaysian perfected his craft as a shoemaker – a family trade – while working part-time at restaurants and as a cleaner in a shoe factory to help fund his education.

"During the eighties I was in London for a holiday and a friend of mine told me there's a special shoe college in Hackney called Cordwainers'," Jimmy recalls. "So I said, although I had training from my father, it's always good to have an education and I didn't have a certificate. So I enrolled in the college to learn more and get more advanced."

“You have the Chinese, people from Jamaica, Ireland, Holland, all sorts of people who love to be in Hackney”

At the time, as is today, Hackney was a hub of offbeat creative talent. The artistic energy that buzzed through the borough's streets inspired Jimmy to stay local and in 1986, after leaving Cordwainers', he opened his first workshop, renting an old hospital building.

"Hackney was a fantastic place, very peaceful and very relaxed in those days," Jimmy says, nostalgically. "All types of designers and artists were in Hackney, and a lot of music stars."

There was also a lot of factories and manufacturing, especially shoe manufacturing. It was a great place."

His craftsmanship and designs were soon noticed by those in the know and it didn't take long before Jimmy Choo shoes became the must-have brand for serious fashionistas.

Patronage from celebrities and royalty, including Diana, Princess of Wales, led to Jimmy becoming an international fashion icon, and in 1998 his success was crowned when he scored an incredible coup – his creations were featured in a record eight pages of Vogue magazine.

In 2000, Jimmy was awarded the Malaysian equivalent of a state honour for his achievements and two years later he received an OBE from the Queen in recognition of his services to the UK shoe and fashion industry.

But even though he's mingled with the world's top names and continues to ply his stylish trade, Jimmy's love and respect for his Hackney roots remains as strong as ever. He said: "Hackney is a multicultural place. You have the Chinese, people from Jamaica, Ireland, Holland, all sorts of people who love to be in Hackney."

"I get my inspiration from that because it's very important that I love what I'm doing and I mix with people and get an idea of how they dress. It's fantastic. Hackney is a special place."

EVER wondered what happens to your recycling once it leaves Hackney?

Read on to find out where your household waste ends its journey.

Batteries are taken to G&P Batteries, based in Darlaston, West Midlands, which specialises in recycling and processing both lead and non-lead acid batteries.

Kitchen and garden waste is sent to London Waste Ltd in Edmonton, where it is composted on site. The end product is used in Hackney's parks and green spaces.

Plastic bottles collected in the Green Box scheme are sent to JFC Plastics Ltd, St Helens, Merseyside. They are turned into drain pipes for construction and agricultural markets, wood substitute decking and fencing, street furniture and traffic lights.

Textiles collected through the Green Box scheme are sent to LM Barry, based in Canning Town, or to Oxfam and TRAIID (registered charities) if left in one of Hackney's textile banks. In each case, materials are sorted into two streams: reusable clothes for charity, or to be reprocessed to make felt, wadding and dusters.

Tins, cans and foil are sent to AMG in Wales, where they are turned straight back into more tins and cans.

KEY FACT

Kitchen and garden waste from the borough is composted and used to nurture our green spaces

Glass is separated into colours and sent to a plant in Harlow, run by British Glass. After it has been cleaned to remove things like labels and plastic, it is mixed with other materials and melted down to be turned into more bottles and jars. They are of the same quality as the originals because glass can be recycled again and again without losing its purity.

Paper is taken to Ayleford Newsprint in Kent, where it is turned into newsprint. Yellow Pages are a low grade paper so can't be treated in the same way. They are sent to Raven's Waste Paper in Croydon, to be shredded for animal bedding. Cardboard goes to London Recycling Ltd, where it is reprocessed into cardboard.

Oil is dealt with by Malary Environmental Services, where it is blended to produce high quality, reclaimed fuel oil (RFO).

The new recycling bins are unloaded at Woodberry Down estate

New services go live on estates

RESIDENTS on Hackney estates have begun using new recycling services being rolled out by the Council.

The first new bins were delivered to Woodberry Down estate this month.

The new service allows residents in high-rise properties to put all their recycling out together, although on some estates paper is recycled separately to maintain its quality.

The Council tried out a number of different methods of collecting recycling from estates, before the new services were chosen.

Many residents took part in the trials, and their input has helped in the development of the new facilities.

Cllr Alan Laing, Cabinet Member for Neighbourhoods, said:

"The new service aims to make recycling easier for residents.

"Results from the trials have helped us to roll out the new service, which is the biggest change to the service since its introduction.

"More materials have been added to the list of accepted recyclables, such as plastic bottles and cardboard."

Star day on the basketball court

Our youth page reporters watched the Great Britain v Czech Republic EuroBasket basketball match at the O2 centre

By Eboni Ferguson and Nicole Swire, 19

THERE was a home-grown hero to root for as the GB team beat Czech Republic 87-68 to top their qualifying group for the European Championships in Poland next year.

A sell-out crowd of over 7,000 roared when former Hackney White Heat and NBA star Pops Mensah-Bonsu was introduced.

He quickly set the tone of the match making the first bucket and went on to score 13 points. Chicago Bulls NBA star Luol Deng also proved popular with everyone except the Czechs, who focused their defence on him, allowing GB the space to develop a healthy lead by the end of the first quarter, 24-10.

GB showed great chemistry with their strategic passes to dunks, which filled the O2 with cheers that reached a crescendo when Deng sunk a three-pointer on the full-time buzzer.

Watching international basketball for the first time, especially at the O2 – which will be a 2012 Olympic basketball venue – was a spectacular experience.

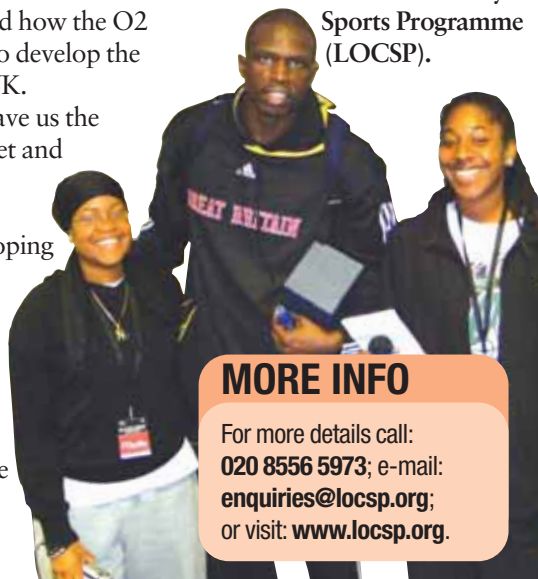

Earlier, we attended a GB team press conference where they discussed basketball's grassroots and how the O2 will be used to develop the sport in the UK.

This also gave us the chance to meet and interview the main people behind developing the game and make some contacts.

At the post-match press conference we interviewed GB Head Coach, Chris Finch, Pops and Deng. The atmosphere was warm as Pops and Deng joked with each other in response to our questions and the team prepared for their next match in Birmingham.

Eboni and Nicole take part in the Spartans Excelsior Media Mentoring programme, run in conjunction with Leyton Orient Community Sports Programme (LOCSP).

Making an impact

By Gracia Douglas

CREATIVE young people got the chance to display their talents at the launch of the innovative Hackney Impact Arts Academy.

Around 70 young people took part in film, dance, music or event management sessions, receiving an ASDAN accreditation and arts award at the end.

Participants were also taught life skills as part of the project, organised by voluntary organisations Mouth That Roars and Rising Tide, and funded by Hackney Youth Service.

The Academy ran for two weeks over August and proved so popular that it will continue in the October and February school half-terms, when young people will be able to gain practical hands-on skills and take part in trips.

Cllr Rita Krishna, Cabinet Member for Children's Services, said: "Congratulations to the organisers and young people who successfully participated in this wonderful project. I hope the Academy will be a launch pad for the wealth of young talent Hackney supports, allowing participants to meet industry professionals and gain practical skills."

Hoops are bouncing back

By Ebony Skerritt from SkyWay

A NEW youth basketball competition has proved so popular that it is being held again in November.

Teenage Hoops was launched during the summer holidays. It followed on from the success of annual youth football tournament Teenage Kicks. Both events are organised by Hackney based youth charity SkyWay.

Hackney White Heat brought the games to a victorious end with a 77-64 win against Hackney Free on 8 August at SPACe in Hackney Community College.

Teenage Hoops project manager, Daniel Mussie, said: "The tournament improved young people's participation in basketball. It kept young people away from the streets, included everyone, and made it fun."

The young people who took part, described the games as 'challenging, competitive and exciting'.

One team member added: "It's basketball. This is the best game in the world."

PREVIEW

Discover the history of the Windrush generation at Hackney Museum, 23 September to 15 November

Living Under One Roof commemorates the 60th anniversary of the SS Empire Windrush's arrival at Tilbury docks on 22 June, 1948.

Earlier this year, some of Hackney's Caribbean elders from islands including Jamaica, Barbados, St Lucia, Dominica and Trinidad, shared their experiences from as early as 1954. Their recollections form the basis for the exhibition, which covers all aspects of life for the first generation of Caribbean migrant workers.

Set in 1962, it features recreated rooms from a Victorian terraced house in Hackney owned by a Jamaican couple who rented out rooms to other Caribbean immigrants.

The exhibition will also include screenings of the documentary Living Under One Roof in Hackney, sponsored by Hackney Museum; photographs, memories and the possessions that people brought with them, including a bible and passports from the 1950s. The Hackney elders who contributed to the exhibition were also filmed sharing their heritage and offering positive messages to young people and communities. They will feature in a documentary, Building Bridges, by Lorna Holder supported through the Heritage Lottery Fund, that will be screened at the British Museum on 28 November.

Hackney Museum, 1 Reading Lane, E8, is open Tues to Sat. Admission is free. For info call: 020 8356 3500 or e-mail: hmusuem@hackney.gov.uk

Judd Batchelor performs her one-woman drama

By Beccy Smart

A Mother Speaks, Hackney Empire Studio, 30 September to 5 October

AFTER successful productions around the country, A Mother Speaks returns to the Empire for six performances. This proactive, topical piece offers a strong message to schools, youth groups and other organisations, but also to the public at large. The performance coincides with the publication of writer and performer Judd Batchelor's play.

The one-woman performance deals with the immeasurable strength of a mother's love, asking the audience to imagine nurturing, caring, educating and supporting a child through their formative years, only for them to be snatched away. It poses the question of how far might a woman go to see justice served if an unprovoked act of violence ends a child's life, just as they are about to begin their independent adulthood. Susie McKenna, Hackney Empire's Artistic Associate (Beau Jest, Sit & Shiver, Sophie Tucker's One Night Stand) directs this acclaimed play about the far-reaching effects of gun crime.

Performances: Tues to Sun, 7.45pm. Ticket prices: £12; £9 concs; £5 groups of 10+. For details and booking visit: www.hackneyempire.co.uk or call the box office on: 020 8985 2424

Top To Toe: Fashion For Kids @ V&A Museum of Childhood, 4 October to April 09, Cambridge Heath Road, E2

EVER felt a sharp twinge of bitterness towards your parents when you've looked back at what you were wearing in old photos?

Top to Toe: Fashion for Kids profiles the changing attitudes, themes and fads of one of fashion's most intriguing and enduring demographics, and is likely to jog a few memories on the way. Visitors may recall evocative brands like Ladybird and Clothkits, or encounter classic memories from their own wardrobes such as parkas, knitted woollen swimsuits, leg warmers and ponchos.

The exhibition will offer a thorough examination of the history of children's fashion, reliving iconic and defining moments from the past 300 years with garments, vintage fashions, rare objects and photography.

The museum holds one of the most significant collections of children's clothing in the world with over 6,000 items dating from the 1700s to the present day. Over 100 of these will be featured in the exhibition.

Other objects, including a group of paintings depicting historical outfits from the V&A's main collections, will complement the clothing on display. The exhibition covers four broad themes: milestones, changing fashions, fashion drivers, and practical fashions. It will consider how materials, colours, shapes and styles have developed, but will also show how many classic garments have remained unchanged or been revived, due to practical design or enduring appeal. This should certainly have something to capture the imagination of children – and the adults who get to tell them what to wear.

The V&A Museum of Childhood is open daily from 10am to 5.45pm. Admission is free. For more details visit: www.museumofchildhood.org.uk

Be a mentor

THE Children's Society, a national charity that provides help for disadvantaged young people, is seeking volunteers from Hackney to become mentors.

This would involve regularly meeting up with a child or young person to enjoy activities together, and provide support and guidance.

Hackney Free and Parochial School will be the local base, starting from the autumn school term, following a successful pilot in South London. The initiative aims to help more young people develop their confidence and skills through mentoring.

It is hoped the project will work with 240 children in the next year, and eventually be rolled out across the UK.

Research shows mentoring has many positive benefits for young people with 52 per cent of those taking part less likely to skip school, 46 per cent less likely to begin using illegal drugs and 27 per cent less likely to begin using alcohol.

Any adult aged 18 and over can apply to be a mentor and The Children's Society offers full support and training.

Getting out of class

Woodberry Down Primary could win an award for its efforts to take education outside the classroom

All stories by
Sylvia Arthur

WOODBERRY Down Primary School has been shortlisted for a national award.

The Learning Outside the Classroom awards recognise schools' commitment to providing innovative learning for young people in non-classroom settings, including in school grounds, on visits to museums, art galleries or farms, or cultural and language visits abroad.

Woodberry Down was shortlisted for its determination to make learning outside the classroom an essential part of the curriculum. It has made wide use of the local environment, helping students to understand literary themes in books about the area, and using their surroundings to learn about geography.

The judging panel was impressed with the inspirational approach to teaching and learning. Judge Peter Carne said: "We recognised Woodberry Down's commitment to integrating learning outside the classroom fully into the school day. They have recognised that this type of learning has huge social, emotional and educational benefits, increasing motivation and self-confidence and helping young people to understand the world around them.”

Announcing the shortlist, Schools Minister, Andrew Adonis, said: "The great work at Woodberry Down demonstrates just one of the many ways learning can be taken outside class for the lifelong benefit of children."

A total of 27 schools have been shortlisted for nine regional awards. Regional winners will be announced on 22 September with national winner unveiled on 2 October in London.

Laying out for the summer

FIVE students from Hackney's New Visions Pupil Referral Unit (PRU) gave up three weeks of their summer break to take on a publishing assignment.

The girls, aged 15 to 17, formed an editorial team that worked alongside staff at Disorder magazine to produce their own music, fashion and lifestyle publication, Candii.

They decided on content, wrote articles and modelled for some of the photo spreads. They also tackled issues like teenage pregnancy and gang culture. The initiative was organised by Inspire!, Hackney's education business partnership, in conjunction with Disorder, and funded by The Learning Trust.

Candii was unveiled at a celebration event in Chat's Palace Arts Centre, Homerton. Copies will now be distributed around the borough. Gloria Dada, Inspire! Programme Officer, said: "On the first day, I sat them down with a blank sheet of paper and asked them to jot down their ideas.

Ten minutes later, they had completely filled the page."

Blessing Benton, 16, took on the role of editor. She said: "It's been really good, but doing this magazine has made me realise just how hard it is."

Robin Childs, Inspire! Engagement Programme Manager, added: "Students find themselves at the PRU for reasons including exclusion, problems that prevent them attending school full time, lack of good English or because they have been unable to find a place at secondary school. We felt it was important to keep everyone motivated with a challenging, exciting programme that grabbed their attention, was career-related, and gave new skills."

“Doing this magazine has made me realise just how hard it is”

All five girls were due to start to college this month.

Prioritising dignity

By
Siobhan Silbert

A CODE aimed at recognising the dignity of older people in the borough has been launched at Homerton hospital.

It was developed by the Older People's Reference Group for City and Hackney and has been endorsed by the Council and local NHS.

The code will also be used as a performance indicator for commissioning contracts for older people's services in the borough this year.

The reference group, which is supported by Age Concern, reports to the Borough Older People's Partnership Board. Jennie Negus, Chair of the Board, and Deputy Director for

Jennie Negus, Deputy Director of Nursing at Homerton, with Cynthia White, Chair of the Older People's Reference Group, adding their signatures to the older people's dignity code

Nursing at Homerton hospital, said: "The code lays down solid foundations for what older people feel are the key areas to ensure they are treated with dignity and due respect in every area of their contact with caring organisations.

"This borough-wide approach ensures that we are all signed up and fully committed to addressing older people's concerns and meeting their aspirations."

Better equipped to enjoy life

PAULINE Constantine is celebrating after winning a £100 shopping voucher in a competition organised by the Council.

The 72-year-old lives in Dalston and suffers from pain in her spine, hips and legs. She responded to a survey which looked at the difference adapting people's homes can make to their lives, after benefiting from this Council service.

She is among hundreds of residents who've had their homes assessed for adaptations ranging from stair rails to bath chairs.

The results of the 2008

survey showed that 93.2 per cent of residents who received such equipment, felt it had improved their quality of life, with over half saying it had made it 'much better'. This puts the Council in the top band according to Department of Health criteria.

Everyone who returned the survey was entered into a prize draw. Pauline said: "I was very, very pleased, I wasn't expecting to win."

Cllr Nargis Khan, Cabinet Member for Community Services, said: "This survey reflects the views of people who are using equipment every day and it is really encouraging to hear what a difference they are making."

NEWS IN BRIEF

Eat well to feel well

PEOPLE living in Wilton Estate, E8, can benefit from a series of healthy eating workshops set up by their Tenants' and Residents' Association (TRA).

The workshops (below), run by a qualified nutritionist, have been made possible by funding from the Tenants Levy Special Projects grant. They take place in the estate's community hall, and offer healthy eating advice and tips about boosting energy levels. Upcoming workshops, which run from 10am to 12noon, include healthy eating on a budget on 1 October; food and mood on 5 November; and healthy eating in winter on 3 December.

For information call:
020 8356 6133.

Empowering diabetes patients

A NEW group education programme for sufferers of Type-2 diabetes has been set up in the borough.

The Hackney Diabetes Centre programme, X-PERT, is designed to help patients understand and manage their illness with confidence, and empower them to communicate with health professionals. It has been shown to improve the overall quality of life of patients who attend.

The centre has staff who are able to respond to the diverse needs of Hackney's communities and the programme can be delivered in Turkish, Punjabi, Hindi and Urdu as well as English. If you would like more info call: 020 8510 5007 or visit: www.xpert-diabetes.com

New voice for disabled people

A NEW forum for disabled people in the borough is to be launched next month. The Hackney Family BackUp scheme is funded by the Council and will be an opportunity for disabled people to have their say about key issues.

The aim is to help disabled people take advantage of Hackney's opportunities; to represent the interests of disabled people who want to access Council services; and to promote equality and reduce discrimination.

The forum will be launched in October, with a website and regular newsletter. For details and updates e-mail: catherine@hfbu.org.uk; or call: 020 7275 0088 and ask for Catherine Love or Sheila Ramdular. Text phone users dial: 18001 0207 275 0088.

Watch Your Waste Week

4th October – 12th October 2008

WATCH YOUR WASTE WEEK

To mark North London's first ever Watch Your Waste Week 2008 we are challenging you to shrink your waste and aim for zero...zero waste.

The easy bit...

Reducing the amount of waste we produce is easy and small changes can make a big difference.

Using a reusable bag, composting at home, buying unpackaged products and repairing items are just some of the things we can all do.

For useful waste shrinking advice, tips, recipes and resources please visit our website or contact Dimitra Rappou on 0207 974 5366.

The fun bit...

For information on Watch Your Waste Week events and activities taking place where you live, including:

- The 'Watch Your Waste Challenge'
- Reusable bag give-aways, and
- Give and take days

PLANNING APPEALS

TOWN AND COUNTRY PLANNING ACT 1990 PUBLIC INQUIRY COUNCIL REF: 2008/1498 PINS REF: APP/U5360/X/08/2083464

An appeal has been made by Mr. Yacov Cohen against the decision of the London Borough of Hackney to refuse to grant a Certificate of Lawful use at 28 Denver Road, London, N16 5JH for the existing use of the property as four self-contained flats together with alterations and additions to existing building; including the insertion of dormer window into the roof and conversion into four self-contained flats.

The inquiry will be held at the Council Chambers, Hackney Town Hall, Mare Street, London, E8 1EA on Tuesday 11th November, 2008 at 10.00 a.m.

Members of the public may attend the inquiry and, at the Inspector's discretion express their views.

If you or anyone you know has a disability and is concerned about facilities at the Inquiry venue, you should contact the council to confirm that suitable provisions are in place.

HEAVY RAINS caused this landslide on the railway line between Hackney and Clapton, where there was serious flooding.

Raining then

By Sally England

MANY parts of the country have suffered badly with flooding following heavy rains in recent weeks.

Hackney thankfully has not been subject to such misery, but in former years it was a very different story for those living near the Lea River and Hackney Brook.

In April 1878, several days of rain resulted in four-foot deep floods in Mare Street, with filthy water from over-flowing sewers causing extensive damage to houses and businesses and inciting much anger against the Metropolitan Board of Works which had ordered the culverting of Hackney Brook.

June 1903, saw the River Lea burst its banks, with tram horses wading knee-deep down Lea Bridge Road and locals forced to move upstairs when the flood reached levels of five feet. Some had to leave their homes altogether as the first floors were under nearly three feet of water.

A relief fund was quickly opened by the Mayor of Hackney and within a week money from the poor box had paid for 120 people to receive two hundredweight of coal and a sack of coke to help them dry out.

The Lea flooded again in 1912, 1919, and 1926, when people living in cottages nearby helped prevent serious damage to their homes by building a miniature dyke out of mud and stakes to keep the water at bay.

Heavy storms brought misery to the area in August 1937, when it was estimated that over 200,000 tons of rain fell in just over an hour. Part of the railway cutting at Clapton was washed away, the line and tunnel flooded by an overflowing sewer. With electrical rail signals also affected, train services were diverted and much delay caused to passengers.

The Hackney Brook made its presence felt once more in 1966, again leaving Mare Street underwater and no doubt arousing similar reactions to those of 1878. Today the Council has an Emergency Plan in place to cope with major incidents such as storms and floods. Thankfully this has not been implemented during the current bad weather – and hopefully it won't have to be.

Picnic time for cyclists

Pedal power at work in the Magnificent Revolution cinema and (below) best-dressed cyclist Anastasia Tata

By
Emma Britton

FANS of two-wheeled transport gathered together to celebrate cycling at the Sunday Cycle Picnic.

Attractions at the London Fields event included garden games like croquet with equipment made from recycled bicycle parts.

There were also vintage cycling films by Ray Pascoe, screened in one of the world's first pedal powered cinemas, the Magnificent Revolution.

Cyclechic.co.uk, Bobbin Bicycles and Sawako Furuno – who helped organise the day in partnership with Hackney Council – ran a lighthearted competition for the best dressed cyclist and bicycle – which was awarded to Anastasia Tata (left) from Hackney. She won a red play bike from Bobbin Bicycles. Jos Parsons from Walthamstow also won a Kitsch Kitchen Cycle and accessories.

The event on 7 September was designed to encourage more women to get on their bikes and experience the freedom of cycling around London without having to change their everyday style.

Cllr Alan Laing, Cabinet Member for Neighbourhoods, said: “Hackney has a great network of cycle routes and has been voted best bike borough in London.

“Cycling is great fun, good for your health and a very green form of transport. Events like the Sunday Cycle Picnic are a great way to

NEWS IN BRIEF

Dial to go further

THOUSANDS of older and disabled Londoners can look forward to a new fleet of Dial-A-Ride vehicles. The 61 custom-built minibuses will be introduced across the capital this year, improving mobility for Londoners who cannot easily use public transport.

Dial-A-Ride passengers and drivers have been closely involved in developing the new bus, manufactured by Bluebird, to ensure it meets users' diverse needs. Transport for London (TfL) has invested £3.9million in these vehicles as part of a long-term programme to improve door to door services in the capital.

Mike Weston, from TfL, said: “Dial-A-Ride provides a vital service to those people who can't access mainstream public transport. These new vehicles should make our customers' journeys much more pleasant.”

The new vehicle is small with a flat, low floor and dual access at the side and rear. Tip and fold seats allow wheelchair users to manoeuvre around the vehicle much more easily; they also provide greater flexibility for accommodating individual passengers' needs.

Walk, meet and move

Come and stretch your legs at free Autumn Amble walks on 27 and 28 September.

The 35 walks covering a total of 362 miles around the capital will give people the opportunity to discover the city by foot and make friends at the same time.

People can choose to wander the stimulating streets of central London, explore the city's fringes, or uncover the beautiful countryside that surrounds it.

In Hackney, a Stoke Newington to Hackney Wick walk heads along towpaths while taking in Hackney and Walthamstow marshes. All walks start and finish at rail, underground and bus stops, and range in distance from 1.5 to 21 miles. For info visit: www.walklondon.org.uk

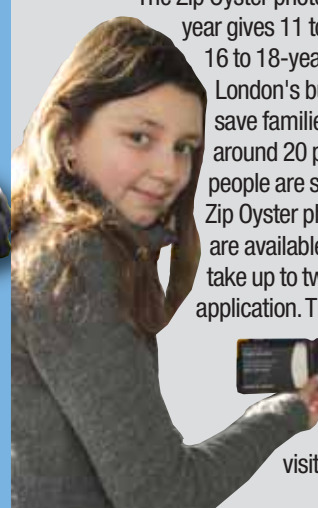

Hurry up and Zip

YOUNGSTERS may be back at school, but not all are taking advantage of free travel, according to TfL.

The Zip Oyster photocard launched earlier this year gives 11 to 15-year-olds, and eligible 16 to 18-year-olds, free travel on London's buses and trams. This could save families over £300 a year, but around 20 per cent of eligible young people are still missing out.

Zip Oyster photocard application forms are available from Post Offices. It may take up to two weeks to process your application. Those 11 to 18-year-olds who do not have a valid Oyster photocard must pay the full adult cash fare. For more info, visit: www.tfl.gov.uk/zip

THIS is the latest in a series of regular recipes courtesy of Water House – an eco-friendly restaurant alongside the Regent's Canal in Shoreditch. As with Water House menus, all the recipes in this column use environmental principles to inspire you to cook good food, and care about the planet. This week the recipe is from Head Chef Marie Gonfond.

Vegetable & ricotta terrine with courgette, aubergine & tomato

Preparation time
30 mins

Cooking time
30 mins

Serves 5

Ingredients

- 5 courgettes
- 2 or 3 aubergines
- 3 ripe English tomatoes
- 200g spinach
- 400g ricotta
- A mix of fresh herbs – mint or basil and some lemon thyme
- Sea salt and freshly ground black pepper

Method

- Slice courgette and aubergine lengthways. Slices about 3-4mm look beautiful, but don't worry if yours are a little less delicate! Slice the tomatoes into even rounds
- Steam the spinach until soft. This is better than blanching as you will lose less flavour and nutrients. Leave to dry.
- Finely chop the herbs and mix into the ricotta with a fork. Season the ricotta and all the vegetables with salt and black pepper.

- Take a 30 x 8 x 10cm baking tin. Line tin with baking paper and put a layer of aubergine slices along the bottom. Arrange the pieces so they stretch across the bottom of the tin and up the sides. The slices need to overlap slightly. Next put in a layer of courgette. Then layers of spinach on top and next tomato. Press each tier down.
- In the centre of the terrine, spread herby ricotta and put in layers of tomato, spinach, courgette and finally a layer of aubergine.
- Fold the baking paper edges over the top to wrap up the parcel and press down one more time. Cook for 30 minutes at 200C. When it's done you'll be able to slide a knife in easily.
- Leave to cool for a few hours or overnight. Serve hot or cold, two slices per person with a little mixed leaf salad on the side.

Top tip: A mandolin is a great way to cut fruit and veg quickly and beautifully, but it can be dangerous. Always use a finger guard, start slowly and concentrate on being smooth and rhythmic. With a little practice you'll be playing the mandolin like a professional

The Mayor & Councillors

Councillors are elected by Hackney residents and serve for four years. The last borough elections were in May 2006.

Councillors have a range of responsibilities, including helping to oversee the Council and its services. They all hold advice surgeries where you can meet your local representative and ask them to take up issues that may be of concern.

Generally they can help with Council related matters, but if the issue is the responsibility of another person or organisation, they can often point you in the right direction and tell you who you need to see.

Hackney has 57 councillors representing areas called wards – illustrated in the map opposite.

Please note: some councillors do not hold surgeries during the school summer holidays. Call the number below to check.

To check which councillor covers your area, or confirm surgery times, call: 020 8356 3373. More info: www.hackney.gov.uk/I-mayor-cabinet-councillors.htm
